The United States Supreme Court is on the precipice of overturning Roe v. Wade—the 1973 Supreme Court ruling that granted women the right to seek an abortion in all 50 states. This lecture will bring together lessons from historical, political, and religious research in order to explain how we reached this point—correcting common misconceptions about the relationship between religion and politics along the way—and better understand abortion politics moving forward.

Michele Margolis an associate professor of political science at the University of Pennsylvania. She studies public opinion, political psychology, and religion and politics. Her work has been supported by the National Science Foundation and appeared in numerous outlets, including: American Journal of Political Science, Journal of Politics, Journal of Experimental Social Psychology, Public Opinion Quarterly, Political Behavior, Politics & Religion. Her book, From Politics to the Pews (University of Chicago Press, 2018), won the Distinguished Book Award from the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion.