June 2020 Graduation

Double Major: Religious Studies and Spanish

I graduated in June 2020 with a double major in Religious Studies and Spanish. The study of religion immediately felt like the appropriate avenue of student for me! I studied abroad at the University of Barcelona in Barcelona, Spain. My program was oriented mostly toward my double major in Spanish, but it afforded me the chance to immerse myself in the Catalan culture, learn Catalan as a third language, and take one course that counted toward my RST major. While on campus take classes with the professor you've heard things about, it might turn out that one class changes your entire life trajectory. The faculty in the religious studies department are some of the most caring, thought-provoking, and truly genuine people on the UC Davis campus. The education you will receive will inspire you for a lifetime. I am currently a Master of Divinity student at Harvard Divinity School, with my studies focusing on queer and trans-affirming Mainline Protestantism. I am pursuing ordination in my Christian tradition, the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America, and discerning if I should work toward a PhD in the study of religion or theology.
